

Planning key to a successful deployment

By 2nd Lt. Rachel N. Ingram
445th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

For Citizen Airmen and families alike, preparing for a deployment can be stressful and overwhelming. The entire process may take as few as three months, or up to a year. In the 445th Airlift Wing, the Airman & Family Readiness (A&FR) office serves as a resource for all potential deployers.

"We provide a wide range of programs and services to support members before, during and after deployments," said Alvin Dennis, community readiness consultant.

The A&FR office provides a pre-deployment checklist which covers personal, financial, and medical topics, among others.

"If you have already obtained a pre-deployment checklist from the A&FR Office, you are far ahead of the process," Dennis said. "If not, please do so immediately."

Unit deployment managers also consolidate pre-deployment tasks in a checklist.

"The first thing an individual needs to do once slotted for a deployment is log in to the Air Expeditionary Force (AEF) Online," said Scotty Lykins, 445th Mission Support Group UDM. "The expeditionary readiness checklist spells out all the training required prior to deploying. Pre-deployment training is paramount."

A number of programs and resources are available to Citizen Airmen and their immediate families during a deployment. Some of these programs begin as much as six months prior to the deployment.

"TriCare Prime is one of the very important benefits relating to Reserve deployments," Lykins said. "It covers six months before the deployment and six months following, and that coverage extends to any dependents listed in DEERS."

Families are also invited to attend a Yellow Ribbon event both before and after the event, which are all-expenses paid.

"It's crucial to be proactive, not reactive," Lykins said. "Update your emergency contact data online, tighten up your family affairs, and keep open lines of communication with your family and spouse throughout the preparation period so they know what to expect."

To successfully transition into a deployment, follow the below timeline while preparing to deploy, in conjunction with directives on the readiness checklists from the A&FR Office and your UDM.

One year prior to deployment

- Obtain a pre-deployment checklist from the A&FR Office

Six months prior to deployment

- Familiarize yourself with the Service Member's Civil Relief Act (SCRA), which ensures protection regarding issues like terminating lease agreements, eviction prevention, deferred income tax, and reduced interest rates on pre-existing debt

- Allow the A&FR Office to create a photo pillowcase for your child under the age of 12, at no cost to you

- Reach out to Dogs on

Deployment, a nonprofit that will connect you with volunteers to board your dog while you're deployed

- Notify your civilian employer of your upcoming deployment, and familiarize yourself with your reemployment rights under the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act (USERRA)

One month prior to deployment

- Connect your spouse with the Key Spouse Program
- Reach out to the Air Force Aid Society if you need an interest-free loan during the deployment

- Attend a Yellow Ribbon event (within 120 days of the start of deployment)

During deployment

- Your spouse is entitled to up to four hours per month of free childcare at one of the child development centers on Wright-Patterson Air Force Base

- The auto hobby shop will perform an oil change and safety check on your spouse's vehicle, free of charge.

For assistance with an upcoming deployment, please call the A&FR office at 937-522-4607.

445th warriors, thanks for another great year!

By Col. Adam Willis
445th Airlift Wing Commander

We have come a long way this past year! On the heels of a great 2016, we...you, certainly ramped it up.

As we look back at our achievements in 2017, I would say that you deserve to pat yourself on the back...I would say that you deserve to be proud, I would say you are the BEST! Period.

Last year was a banner year for the 445th Airlift Wing. Our very own 445 Aircraft Maintenance Squadron won the Chief of Staff Team Excellence Award for the ENTIRE Air Force! Way to go AMXS! Maj. Gen. Randall Ogden stated he was proud and honored to present this lofty achievement to the men and women of the 445 AMXS.

If that wasn't enough, the Vice President of the United States, Michael Pence and his wife second lady Karen Pence paid us a visit for Armed Forces Day... what an honor is was to host the VP. Again, the men and women of the 445 AW stood proud and accomplished before the Vice President.

Additionally, Air Force Reserve Command Command Chief Erica Kelly visited the wing last year and met and talked with many of the Airmen in the 445th...a great opportunity to meet with the chief.

You, the Airmen of the 445th, were the first reserve unit to volunteer to provide much needed airlift for the nation as it recovered from three devastating hurricanes. We moved more than 600 people and nearly 2 million pounds of relief supplies. We sent Airmen from multiple disciplines to many states to support their recovery.

We deployed more than 150 members for a total of 4,717 days last year. Our flying group flew more than 4,700 hours in support of a multitude of requirements for several Combatant Commands.

Our FSS really stood out last year by winning five awards ranging from best force support NCO, best senior force support NCO, best military personnel program and best education and training program...what a year for FSS! Not want to be left out, our very own Major Vance won the AFRC's General Gerrity award for outstanding work in the logistics field. The list goes on...this is normal operations for the outstanding men and women of the 445 AW.

The proud men and women of the 445 AW have a long heritage of being the best and I, for one, would not argue that fact. Since I have been here, the dedication to service, the excellence in all you do and your integrity is embodied in every wingman in the 445th Airlift Wing.

It manifests itself in both the concrete and the abstract. From enlisted development to awards banquets, from deployments to hurricane relief and HADR [humanitarian assistance/disaster relief], from aircraft generation to the warfighter training center...the vision of the 445 AW cannot be contained, nor will it. Let it spill out among the masses...let it permeate in all endeavors you can muster...let it be a testament to you, the heart of this great organization...the 445 Airlift Wing. Because it is your unbridled vision that will ensure your future...that will ensure the future of the 445 AW as the BEST!

As the 445 AW continues to mature and train its younger wingmen, I cannot express my gratitude to all the families whom entrust us with their loved ones. It cannot be overstated that the family makes a warrior a warrior! We simply train you, but your family gives you the strength to endure, to excel, to succeed, to grow, to respect...the family is at the heart of success and it is because of you and your family that the 445 AW will continue to be the BEST!

From my family to yours, Elyse and I wish you all, the 445 AW men and women, the very best in the upcoming year. Happy New Year!

Stay safe, Stay proud and Stay engaged...

Airmen bring holiday cheer to Dayton area vets

By Airman 1st Class Ethan Spickler
445th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Airman from the 445th Airlift Wing participated in the annual Veteran Affairs Christmas party December 2, 2017, at the Dayton VA Medical Center in Dayton, Ohio.

The annual party is sponsored by the Air Force Sergeant's Association and the staff of the Dayton VA Hospital. The event aims to bring service members and veterans closer together while providing an extraordinary opportunity to fellowship.

During the festivities, food and beverages were provided; live holiday music from the 88th Air Base Wing's Band of Flight was played throughout the afternoon; and holiday gifts were distributed. Even Santa Claus found time to attend, despite his busy holiday schedule.

"We are thankful for everyone coming out and showing their support," said David I. McCoy, the president of the AFSA Chapter 751 and volunteer coordinator at the Christmas party. "We like to do whatever we can to help our service members, and this event is a great way to do something special for the veteran community. Our organization brings us into contact with so many amazing people, and events like this allow us to give back."

During the gathering, members of the 445th conversed with AFSA members and the veterans at the hospital while participating in the holiday cheer. Some Airmen collected gifts prior to the event to deliver to the veterans.

With all of the hustle and bustle surrounding the holiday season, the event at the Dayton VA hospital brought into perspective the fact that our nation's veterans deserve a chance to experience the best parts of the holidays and that nothing makes an impact more than being able to give for the sake of others.
